

THE HASHLESS TIMES

Hashgate Haircut day is almost here. Your Scribe has been struggling with an ever-thickening, ever-lengthening, tonsorial forest for some time. It now has its own eco-system. Brightly-coloured parrots have been seen to fly out of it and screeches from Howler Monkeys occasionally pierce the space around it. Several hair brushes have been absorbed during failed attempts to control it. I was thinking of having it styled à la Queen Elizabeth II, with a stately roll to each side on the top – perfect for tiaras. Combing it forward on one side produced a white-haired Tony Blackburn fashion – not a good look. Centre parting? Hmm, a touch too much Oscar Wilde.

When Donut and I were in Cornwall last week NappyRash recommended I didn't enter any fields full of sheep in case I got dragged into the shearing pens! Very good advice.

Next week I'll include a picture post-haircut. Really looking forward to it. If anyone would like to send me pre and post-haircut pictures I'll publish them in next week's Gobsheet.

HASH WALK

Slips kindly sent some pictures of last Sunday's socially distanced Hash Walk. They went from Kintbury to Hungerford, then back along the canal. It was pretty hot at times!

NATURE CORNER

A Red Capped Manakin

Something a little different in our Nature Corner this week. We enjoyed the tiny, dancing Sparkle Muffin spider a couple of weeks ago. This time it's the turn of the Manakin Bird. This little fellow impresses the ladies with his unique 'Moonwalk', skittering back and forth along branches on his toes to attract a mate. Check out his fantastic dance here. Enjoy and marvel!
