Hash with a difference

While our Gobsheet scribe Hashgate was sweating his socks off here. →

We all sweated in our socks as we On Outed from the Red lion.

Today's Hares provided us with a lovely mix of tarmac and deep shiggy.

We on outed from the Red Lion car park with runners and walkers jostling for position. Having just spent a week skiing it was odd to see people with ski poles but no skis, but those poles would have come in handy through the first field of shiggy as I managed to nearly go Ar5e over elbow while trying to take notes for the Gobsheet.

The pack spread out. Or at least I spread to the back anyway which seems fairly normal. While trying to catch up with the pack I found myself running behind Floater who shouted "petrol" as he came to a stop at the edge of a road. Unfortunately I didn't quite stop as quick and very nearly pushed him into the road much to Dumber's amusement. Dumber asked me if I had increased Floaters life insurance recently.

On a part of trail that split I chose the wrong path and quickly came across a bar. I decided to short cut across through the trees and proudly told the hasher behind me that as I'm dishing out down downs and writing the Gobsheet no one can stitch me up for short cutting this week. Oh wait ...Ah too late.

On a long straight part of the trail Gnasher decided to start telling me about a weird TV program she saw where a lady was communicating with animals. I felt it only fair to stop her and let her know that I was writing this weeks Gobsheet. Gnasher smiled and continued to tell me the lady had been talking to a chicken about why it was not laying any eggs. Turns out it was a fox strike if you are interested (but nothing to do with me!)

Gnasher then told me the lady on TV spoke to a cat who told the lady to F off. I always did think cats have a bit of attitude. Not sure what this program was but it might be worth a watch for comedy value.

At one point of particularly bad shiggy Special branch informed me we were definitely over the worst of it. We weren't. Continuing to plough through it all we ended up going through some lovely woods with Bluebells just showing. They are going to be stunning when they finally break through. Can we do this Hash again then please ☺

Today's regroup photo which at least allowed me to take a few more notes before we got straight back into shin deep shigg. Pointless wearing the waterproof shoes today ! They are currently just keeping it all in to slosh around.

Due to Plods absence due to injury (we wish her speedy recovery) today's false checker was mostly Rampant from what I saw. A duty he seemed happy to fulfill and at one check Francis sped off in one direction to check it out. I didn't let him go too far before calling him back onto the trail but great to see some enthusiasm for checking (given my normal stance is try and catch my breath while someone else find the route)

At one point we had a lovely gently slope down a by-way as it meandered down the valley. But that meant only one thing ! A not so lovely yomp back up the other side. Luckily for me I was behind a long line of hashers walking so although I'd love to have run up the hill (not) I just settled in and plodded with the pack.

Today I witnessed a strange deal with Foxy's beaver take place. I happened to be stood between Billy and MotoX when Billy got the beaver out and gave it to MotoX in some kind of sneaky County Lines drug deal. Clearly Billy didn't know who I was though as he proceeded to call me Fluffy. MotoX turned out to be less than happy at having to carry the beaver even though he was wearing a jacket with pockets 😊

I think we were all very relieved to see the On Inn today as we all trotted happily towards a pub that we knew was closed.

What an amazing bunch of hashers who against all odds turned disaster into a success. No one moaned about the pub being closed and everyone just got stuck in and accepted it for what it was. Lucky it wasn't raining or we would have been very cozy under that shelter.

Thanks to the Hares for an excellent trail and best wishes to Zeb and TT2 for their Birthday.

On On

Down Downs

As the pub was closed due to a power outage we took over the garden for Down downs as we didn't want a reputation for hanging around car parks.

Foxy was here (for once) to award the following down downs.....

Recipient	Reason
Canal Bobb	For Vaulting a 5 bar gate and proving he can still get his leg over.
Pyro	Whose very young Puppy Bungie crashed into GT
TT2	Today's very welcome returnee
Ice Man	Today's Hash crasher
Spot	For completing 100 consecutive runs. Since the honorary President Hashgate was away RA Foxy presented Spot with goodies (see below)
Floater	Very Hashy Birthday to him. (Foxy stated this definitely counted as a birthday gift to Floater and she really didn't need to get him anything else.)

TT2	Todays Apron recipient
Shitfor	For not wanting to stay for down downs because he was only allowed one beer (he left as soon as he got his down down 😊)
Francis	Todays Virgin. Well done for checking out the falses. Will make a great hasher with a down down like that !
Flo Special Branch & Spot	Todays lovely Hares. With a special mention to Plod for purchasing emergency beer.
Moto X	For being handed Foxy's beaver on todays trail on a county lines transfer and moaning about having to carry it.

Spot with his Stificate for 100 consecutive runs.
 Complete with fireworks
 Blister plasters
 Sharable Chocolate 😊
 And a set of interchangeable numbers so he can amend the Stificate for next week and beyond.

Future Hashes (Starting at 11:00 on Sunday mornings unless stated otherwise.)

Thanks to Hashgate for the Gobsheet template. Apologies to all for unusual formatting due to Foxy's inability to drive anything Microsoft based.

I also have a new respect for Hashgate doing this every week. I knew it was difficult by my word !!!! Sorry for anything and anyone I forgot or spelt wrong.
